QBV Description:

Pression is a medical device startup repurposing military technology for the treatment of coronary artery disease. The Wave PRO is a cardiac-gated compression therapy which applies sequential compression to the calf muscles during cardiac diastole. This therapy is called External Counterpulsation (ECP). ECP has been approved for the treatment for refractory angina for decades, but has failed to obtain broad acceptance due to the financial, space, and staffing requirements of delivering the treatment. Pression is completed the clinical stage with expectation to gain FDA clearance and commercial in 1Q2026.

QBV Amount Invested: $350,000 in a single convertible debt note.

QBV Use of Funds:

Pression utilized the invested funds to support preparation for clinical trials. Pression's Wave PRO has begun use in Pression's first external clinical trial. Following this work, Pression intends to begin clinical trials for its initial Refractory Angina indication. Upon successful completion of the clinical trial, Pression will apply for FDA 510(k) clearance to enter the market as a Refractory Angina treatment. Pression has depleted all of the QBV funds and is working on a new capital series raise.
