Act 79 Implementation: Why is There Such Variance Among Commonwealth Counties?

- Melody J. Slashinski, PhD, MPH, Qualitative Methodologist
- Elizabeth Van Nostrand, Associate Professor, Temple University's Barnett College of Public Health

Johns Hopkins University reports that almost 50% of women murdered in the US are killed by a current or former intimate partner. Of these homicides, more than half are by firearms. In October 2018, Pennsylvania Governor Wolf signed Act 79 into law - a law that requires judges to order a defendant to relinquish their firearms, other weapons, and ammunition following a final protection from abuse order. A previous quantitative study conducted by Indiana University of Pennsylvania found wide variance in the implementation of Act 79 across Pennsylvania counties. Through a grant funded by PCCD, researchers from Temple University's College of Public Health are currently conducting a new study to evaluate differences in the county-level implementation of Act 79 in Pennsylvania. In addition to discussing the study's design, commentary from participants will be elicited regarding preliminary findings and trends.

Track 1: Behavioral Health & Justice

Lived Experience in Action: County Innovations in Peer-Integrated Initiatives

- Lauren Henderson, Associate, Justice System Partners
- Dr. Jennifer Lerch, Senior Associate, Justice System Partners

Across Pennsylvania, counties are transforming reentry, recovery, and overdose prevention through the power of lived experience. Supported by the Bureau of Justice Assistance's COSSUP Program, this session spotlights county initiatives in Allegheny, Fulton, and York where Certified Recovery Specialists provide critical support as people transition from incarceration back to their communities. Presenters will share how embedding peers in settings like jails and Public Defender's offices builds trust, engagement, and meaningful recovery and reentry connections.

From Intake to Impact: Bridging Systems and Transforming Pennsylvania's Juvenile Justice System

- Stephanie Black, Juvenile Court Consultant, Juvenile Court Judges' Commission
- Bill Keim, Program Manager of Strategic Operations, Juvenile Court Judges' Commission
- Jay Leamy, Deputy Chief Probation Officer, Chester County Juvenile Probation
- William Rumbaugh, Juvenile Court Consultant, Juvenile Court Judges' Commission
- Angel R. Stewart, Juvenile Court Consultant, Juvenile Court Judges' Commission

- Michael Yoder, Juvenile Court Consultant, Juvenile Court Judges' Commission

Pennsylvania's juvenile justice system integrates research-driven practices and stakeholder engagement to foster systemic improvement. A standardized, evidence-informed intake process leads this transformation by employing structured decision-making tools that empower system professionals to make consistent, effective, and equitable decisions for system-involved youth. This session will explore how this approach connects system partners for effective collaboration. Attendees will learn about its practical application, its impact on youth outcomes, and strategies for sustaining collaboration that drives continuous systemic improvements.

From Silos to Coordinated Systems: How to Leverage and Connect Parallel Justice Initiatives to Advance Local Priorities

- Devon Chianos, Deputy Chief Co-Responder, Stepping Up Co-Chair/Certified CIT Coordinator, Dauphin County District Attorney's Office
- Megan Davidson, Program Director, Behavioral Health Division, The Council of State Governments (CSG) Justice Center
- Lahiz P. Tavárez, Project Manager, Behavioral Health Division, The Council of State Governments (CSG) Justice Center

While counties across Pennsylvania are investing in Stepping Up, crisis response, and other justice initiatives to get more people connected to treatment, too often these efforts run on parallel tracks, creating silos, duplication, and missed collaborative opportunities for real impact. This session provides a solution for that complexity by outlining ways that counties can braid their initiatives into a unified, strategic system. With practical strategies and real examples from a Pennsylvania county that has successfully aligned its goals, streamlined efforts, and connected the dots across initiatives, participants will discover how to reduce redundancy, strengthen collaboration, and improve outcomes.

Track 2: Gun Violence Reduction

Violence Intervention Prevention: Navigating Firearm Safety and Weapons Relinquishment Orders

- Caroline Charles, Legal Advocacy Service Coordinator, Women's Center & Shelter of Greater Pittsburgh
- Lynn Kacsuta, Senior Criminal Justice Coordinator, Women's Center & Shelter of Greater Pittsburgh

During this session, Women's Center and Shelter of Greater Pittsburgh's Firearms Safety Team will discuss their new approach to firearms safety awareness related to intimate partner violence. Their work is grounded in the Lethality Assessment Program as well as Protection from Abuse Weapons Relinquishment Orders. This presentation will also include an open discussion format with attendees in the hope of continuing to gather and share information to support intimate partner violence safety needs and their potential impacts on our communities.

Track 3: Reentry

Work Matters: Creating a Talent Pipeline Through Probation, Workforce, Trades Alignment

- Sanjeev Baidyaroy, Deputy Director of Evaluation, Fifth Judicial District of Pennsylvania's Criminal Division
- Hillary Lyle, Director, Work Matters, REFORM Alliance
- Ashlee Lynn, Deputy Director of Operations, Allegheny County Adult Probation
- Shá Sanders, Legislative Manager, REFORM Alliance

Across the U.S., 3.7 million Americans are on community supervision-twice the size of the prison population-and 51% of people on probation lack full-time employment, even as employers face persistent labor shortages. REFORM's Work Matters Initiative addresses this gap through a systems-level approach that aligns county workforce and probation agencies with the skilled trades industry. This session will highlight how the Work Matters pilot was designed and launched in Pennsylvania and Virginia, examine the roles of key ecosystem partners, and share lessons learned to support replication and scale nationwide. Attendees will leave with practical employment-service best practices for engaging and supporting individuals on supervision, as well as insights on building cross-system partnerships that meet employer demand.

Rethinking Probation in Pennsylvania: The Promise of Act 44

- Brian Crow, Senior Director of Implementation, REFORM

Probation is designed to help guide participants in a positive direction, but those on probation often encounter needless barriers to reentry. To address this, a coalition of advocates worked collaboratively to pass Act 44, a law that has transformed probation in Pennsylvania. This session explores the evidence-based policies behind Act 44, how they impact people on probation, and have shifted probation's focus to supporting individual success and well-being.

2:30 p.m. – 2:45 p.m.

Afternoon Break

Expanding the Frame: Advancing Intersectional Approaches to Community Violence Intervention

- Dr. Sylvia C. Washington, Director of Community Engaged Research and Partnerships, Johns Hopkins Center for Gun Violence Solutions, Bloomberg School of Public Health

Keynote

2:45 p.m. – 4:00 p.m.
Presidents Hall

Dr. Sylvia C. Washington is a public health researcher and advocate whose work centers the experiences, leadership, and resilience of Black women and girls. In this keynote, she challenges us to expand our understanding of Gun Violence Prevention (GVP) not just as a matter of policy, but as a public health imperative rooted in equity, prevention, and collective care.

Community Violence Intervention (CVI), a key strategy within GVP, has proven effective when it is trauma-informed, community-driven, and sustainably funded. Programs that invest in credible messengers and support wraparound services have helped reduce shootings and build trust in communities most affected by violence. But for CVI and GVP strategies to fully live up to their promise, they must also be intersectional, recognizing and responding to the unique ways violence affects Black women, girls, and LGBTQ+ individuals.

Dr. Washington offers an urgent and hopeful call to action. By applying a public health lens grounded in intersectionality, she urges researchers, practitioners, and policymakers to expand who is seen, heard, and included in the work of violence prevention and to build systems that reflect the full humanity of every community member.

2026 Criminal Justice Advisory Board (CJAB) Conference

Driving Change Together

AGENDA

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 2026

8:45 a.m. – 9:30 a.m.
Presidents Hall

Welcome and Opening Remarks/Awards Ceremony/Closing Remarks

- James Turner, Chairperson, Criminal Justice Advisory Committee

Missing Persons: Reentry, and the Aftermath of Incarceration

- El Sawyer, Co-founder, Media in Neighborhoods Group (MING)

The Missing Persons keynote address reframes reentry by naming what is consistently left out of public health, justice, and service-provider conversations: the lasting psychological and neurological impact of incarceration itself.

Keynote

9:30 a.m. – 10:30 a.m.
Presidents Hall

Drawing from lived experience, documentary storytelling, and emerging research, El Sawyer will outline how social isolation, chronic stress, loss of agency, and institutional trauma fundamentally reshape behavior, identity, and decision-making, long after a person returns home. The talk challenges the assumption that people coming home from prison can simply “pick up where they left off,” and instead asks what reentry looks like when we acknowledge the full human cost of incarceration.

This keynote invites practitioners, service providers, funders, and community members to rethink reentry not as a compliance problem, but as a trauma / neuro-informed public health issue, and to consider how systems might respond differently if they truly understood what has been missing all along.
